ANIMAL ETHICS IN MODERN SOCIETY

Causing suffering and killing animals for a non-essential and even trivial reason as fashion contravenes public morality. Opinion polls from a number of countries have consistently demonstrated that the majority of citizens consider breeding animals for fur unacceptable.

Fur is a non-essential luxury item. An increasing majority of the population finds it unjustifiable to subject animals to prolonged suffering for trivial ends, such as fur coats or fashion accessories. The public's long-standing opposition to fur farming and our changed ethical perception of animals is reflected by law in an increasing number of countries.

The ethical concerns of a large majority of the population and the inherent cruelty of fur farming have led an increasing number of countries to legislate against fur farming in recent years.

“Causing suffering and taking the life of an animal for a non-essential and even trivial reason cannot be morally justified. It contravenes public morality in the Netherlands.”
